Go to the contents of go-to footman's title character Ex is Chip Sanders (Bateman): a wheelchair-bound, bow tie-wearing former high school classmate Sophia (Pete) who slept with him -- only once-back in their cheerleading days. When Sofia's slacker husband, Tom (Braff), comes to work at Chip's advertising agency New Agey, Chip, a sleek devil on two wheels, intends to sabotage his rival's career. While Bateman rolls through the film with washed-up comic skill, the whole exercise seems like a half-baked-high concept and some funny gags that aren't great comedy to make. (Now play; Click here for venues.) - Tom Beer Published: Thursday May 17 2007 With Android System WebView, you don't have to leave your app to open links. This program serves as a mini-browser and allows you to view external sources quickly and comfortably. Android System WebView is a component of the Android system that serves as a quick view of links through apps on your device. Running on Google Chrome, the Android System WebView app works like a miniature version of the browser. You can use it to open links through the apps you use. You'll find Android System WebView installed in most Android devices by default, which means it's safe. Thus, this tool helps especially those who browse applications for social networks or develop software. The mini browser has all the functions of the real deal, including scrolling and searching for text. As mentioned, the app will come pre-installed. If you don't like it though, you can disable it through the settings. However, doing so can lead to the collapse of some applications. It's also a job remembering that you need an Android WebView system upgrade to keep it running smoothly. Where can you run this program? This program works exclusively on Android devices with 9.0 versions and up. Is there a better alternative? Yes. If you are a Chrome user, then this web browser can do the same for you. There's also an extension called Chrome WebViewer that gets it done. For iOS users, the WebView user interface is a good choice. Once you've installed Android System WebView, it can make it much easier to use your apps. Should you download it? Yes. This utility will make your phone more useful if you can save mobile resources and patience for downloads. Windows Only: System Information for Windows is a free system utility that allows you to view the configuration of the system in almost every conceivable aspect of your software, hardware, and network configurations. There are many applications that cover similar SIW territory, but this is by far the biggest conglomerate of tools in one small, simple run that I've seen. SIW can provide you with detailed information about every piece of hardware in your system, list license information for installed programs, and (scary) list all stored Firefox and Internet Explorer usernames and provide you with an overview of your network traffic and network applications. This Swiss Army Knife System Information is free, only Windows. SIW - System information for Windows Lee your download folder is constantly cluttered with old files that you don't even remember downloading? Of course, you can always just delete the contents of the folder and start over, but the best way to teach your computer is how to clean it for you. For this task, we will use a small free software called Belvedere, which can move or delete files based on user rules, which you can easily customize in the interface. To get the full benefit of automated cleaning, you also have to set up a great CCleaner cleaning system app to automatically run every night. Using Belvedere After downloading the performed and keeping it to a safe place, you can just run it and get the right job (no installation required). If you want the app to start automatically when you log in, you can create a shortcut in the shell folder: startup. The first thing you want to do is click the Plus character in the bottom left corner to add a new Folder look. Next, you want to select a folder in the logically named Folder Browser dialogue. Once you've added a folder, you'll want to first choose it on the left side... Then click on the plus symbol below the Rules box to create a new rule by giving it an appropriate name, like Cleanup Old Downloads. The interface will allow you to create several conditions to fit the files, but since we are trying to clear the old downloads you can choose the date of the last opened and not in the last x days, which is pretty easy to understand. You probably want to send the file to the bin rather than just delete it, and you can refine the filter further by adding a new rule with a plus icon, and showing the extension and matching one of the, and then putting the file extension in a box separated by a comma (don't use the period). The test button will show you which files will fit, so you won't make a big mistake. Once you're done with this rule, you can create a completely different rule to fit different files for example, I created a rule to move all uploaded images into the Pictures folder. Once you have created all your rules, you can minimize the application of the tray system and it will run silently in the background, clearing after after it's not an ideal app and certainly has a few bugs (so use the bin recycling option instead of deleting it), but overall it's a great app to keep your system cleaned.
